Maremma Romagnola Maremma Romagnola, or Maremma Longo, is a breed of domestic sheep from the central Apennine peninsula, from Romagna, in the region of Emilia-Romagna in northern Italy. The typical size for the breed is about, and the head is white in colour with black skin, hair, and eyes. It is mainly used for its meat, but some are used for wool and milk. They are commonly used for breeding by Romagnolo sheep farmers. The breed has a large number of phenotypic variations, and is genetically heterogeneous. It has been established in the region since the 1950s, but in Italy is only recognised by the Consorzio Alpino Romagnolo (C.A.R.), and the Department of Agricultural, Food and Forestry Policy of the Italian Ministry of Agriculture. The Italian herding sheep breeders association, Associazione Nazionale Allevatori del Merino Artigiano (AN.A.A.), received a permit to register the breed in 2014. History Maremma sheep were originally brought to the region of Emilia-Romagna from the Apennines by shepherds in the late 19th century, and from the mid-20th century, populations were maintained on the eastern shore of the Po River by Romagnolo farmers. The sheep were registered in the Livestock Conservatory (Consorzio Alpino Romagnolo) in 1964. The conservatory promoted the breed between the 1960s and 1980s, and was responsible for the creation of the Maremma Romagnola registry. A herding society, Associazione Nazionale Allevatori del Merino Artigiano (AN.A.A.) was formed in 2013 to establish the registry for the Maremma Romagnola breed. The breed is recognised by the Department of Agricultural, Food and Forestry Policy of the Ministry of Agriculture of Italy.
