EXERCISE 1 – Remove The White Borders The easiest way to remove a border is to use the Magic Wand tool. In addition, the Edit menu has a Cut command that works the same as the cut-out command that we used in GIMP. With the image open in Photoshop, begin by following these steps: 1. Use the Magic Wand tool to select the white border. The white border outlines a border of a specific color. Typically, the border color is part of your logo's color scheme. In the example shown in Figure 1-3, the border color is white. Figure 1-3: The magic wand selects the white border. 2. Right-click (Windows) or Ctrl+click (Mac) and select Cut from the shortcut menu. The Cut command copies the contents of the selection area to a new area

Intro: The New York Times has done a remarkable job of covering the protests in Iran, from the perspective of how they began (the Brooklyn Bridge protest, the New York subway protest, and the rally in support of the Iranian flag-raising) to their modus operandi (the role of social media) to the way they have morphed with time. Before the protests began, The New York Times argued that the White House should not play “fault-finding” and have not blamed Iran for the violence that they have provoked. Authors: Many blame the Iranian government or its leaders for the shortcomings of the protestors, as the demonstrators “deteriorated into a neo-fascist mob,” or “they were misled by government agents into killing themselves in useless acts of vandalism.” For example, the New York Times condemns the protestors who destroyed the New York subway system. Authors: The Times focuses on the violence in the occupied area of Tehran where the protests were initially organized, and notes that Iranians killed 17 people in other cities in recent days. The New York Times generally does not highlight violent outbreaks elsewhere, arguing that the protests were in violation of the rights of Iranians to free expression. Authors: The author notes that the protestors are not a single movement, and that different factions can be identified. The dissent is “inspired and organized by social media; in contrast,” he notes, the protestors were “largely organized and inspired by older clerics and religious leaders.” He argues that protestors want a more open government and freedom of expression for the people. Authors: The author says that “Iran’s security services are increasingly feared for their violent oppression of peaceful protests,” noting that after the security services killed 19 protestors in 2013, the numbers were only “an improved tally, closer to the 35 protestors reportedly killed in 2009.” The author warns that “if not confronted with the security services, the well-paid, well-organized and armed forces can deliver police-style beatings that leave protestors hospitalized.” Authors: The author notes that “no one is quite sure” how the protests began. In hindsight, we can understand that “the authorities, eager to control a Muslim majority country, played the blame game, and spun the story that economic grievances were to blame,” as they suggested that the protestors were led by “loose American

What's New in the Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.0.1)?

Evaluation of an immunochromatographic assay (SD Bioline Agar 5) in the detection of Plasmodium vivax. In our study, an immunochromatographic assay kit (SD Bioline Agar 5) was used for the detection of Plasmodium vivax malaria. This method was compared with microscopy. In a pilot study, we included 1043 adult subjects of a suburban area in Colombia. In a second phase, from patients with fever confirmed by microscopy, we compared SD Bioline and microscopy. Immunochromatographic assay kit can be considered a rapid, low cost, and easy to perform method for the diagnosis of malaria compared to microscopy in urban areas. The percentage of agreement was 79.7% (95% confidence interval, 73.8%-85.3%) for the comparison with microscopy. The SD Bioline Agar 5 kit is easy to perform, with a short time of 10 minutes, but gives lower sensitivity than microscopy. Biofortification of genistein from Daucus carota. The possible biofortification of phytoestrogenic components, such as genistein, in plants of the genus Daucus and Brassica is presented. In Brassica, this natural and strong plant estrogen is highly accumulable in transgenic plants. It has been shown that engineering in Brassica species the use of synthetic auxin, cytokinin, gibberellic acid and strict pathogen (viruses) resistance genes, along with a suitable system of selective culture allows an effective accumulation of genistein in the Brassica leaves. This accumulation can be an interesting tool for obtaining disease-free crops in storage. Screening of the human gastric mucosa for gastrin- and somatostatin-producing cells with specific antibodies. Biopsies of normal human antral and corporal mucosa were screened for the presence of gastrin (G) and somatostatin (S) immunoreactive cells using immunofluorescence and immunoperoxidase techniques. Antral cells immunoreactive for G in their cytoplasm were found in 20% of the specimens, whereas S-immunoreactive cells were not detected in any of the specimens tested. A possible role of G- and S-secreting cells in functional alterations is discussed. There is a tremendous amount of pressure to get off the treadmill and run to the other side of the world
