Kirby is a DApp that's building a revenue model by selling a product of NFTs that are tied to a regular price. Let's look at how this works: If you buy a product right now, you're given a product at a fixed price. So if the price increases or decreases outside of your control, your product is worth less. However, if you buy a product just before the product's launch, you're given access to it for a longer period of time, and thus more time to buy it at the new price. Since the NFT product is a limited edition, it could even go down in price eventually. So what is Kirby going to do with all of this new knowledge? You can look forward to enjoying all of these benefits, like limited edition items that are dropping in value and decreasing in supply. Essentially, Kirby will be your personal currency store, where you can buy and sell NFTs and pay for real estate, giving you a more seamless experience. You can even use it to pay for items on gaming platforms and MMOs. The team behind Kirby is also building a platform for DApps to sell their own NFTs with their own set prices. This will incentivize developers to create new services and DApps on their platform to sell their own NFTs. I highly recommend checking out the video below to see how Kirby is going to work. I'll be writing more about this soon as I get more familiar with it. We'll be releasing more on The District (a DApp that enables social games) in the future.

Zip incl. I'm open to other ideas that would work. A: As you've figured, because the login screen is just a web page, you'll have to use SSL. Otherwise the connection will be unencrypted and anyone sniffing will read your credentials and everything else. That aside, your current logic is wrong. You're parsing the filename before you've even started the for loop so it won't work. I'd suggest putting the split line on the condition, after which you've started iterating.
