Nuri Shimsheker Selâşuk University, Director of the Rumi Research Center SUN ENLIGHTENED VI Facts and fiction go hand in hand about Shams of Tabriz c. This time around, his role in the history of the Islamic renaissance takes center stage, because his the significance goes far beyond the project of national revival carried out by his father Hassan al-Rumi and uncle Hasan Sillam After the victorious Battle of Karbala, when the Muslims fortified themselves in southern Mesopotamia, Nasir Khosrow realized that this rich southern Mesopotamian valley was right in front of him. It opens a free passage to the south, and with it new opportunities for the conquest of India. All he had to do was establish relations with Syria, Ghazna and other emirates of Central Asia. It may seem that one of the most beautiful deeds of history - the conquest of numerous states located in Central Asia and which are the four countries that received the name "Central Asia": Uz bekistan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan and Kyrgyzstan. Surprisingly, in reality, Western civilization had nothing to do with this important conquest, which had no impact on the development of the Muslim world and the history of Central Asia. At the same time, thanks to the Babylonian conquests, a much larger number of countries lying south of Islam were captured by other states and included in the Islamic world. In modern times, this country (fictitious) is the historical name of Afghanistan, and in some countries, such as Pakistan and Uzbekistan, it is called the "Land of M." Taking into account the fact that such a name of the city was imposed on Islam by Rabbi Muhammad, who was very fond of everything eastern, being the great-grandfather of the Prophet Muhammad, and it is known for sure that this happened in 722, it can be assumed that this city is the easternmost capital of the state of Kufi or Eastern Turkestan. The exact history is not known. Perhaps it was a city located in the historical region of Rudaki or in the Sindh valley. Its location was probably in Central Asia, since it is known how much attention was paid to this geographical region in the Myth of the Sons of Lot - a story from the beginning of time to the Flood. It refers to the sons' town of Lot. According to legend, he was on the edge of the earth, on a rock that was like a magnet of attraction
