AdSense Client ID. The following characters are recognized for input: a-z A-Z 0-9 / ; : ! @ Please remember, that there is no need for an XHTML-valid URL in input, only a valid adspace URL, which starts with relief map A monocular relief map is a relief map of a terrain formed using more than a single view of a given terrain. Monocular relief maps are used to compare, visualize, and derive data from those maps. These relief maps are made from aerial photographs, either orthophoto quadrangles or World Imagery Program images. A monocular relief map is constructed by computer software that compares the data from a range of photographs, and forms the map for a given viewpoint. If this perspective is not symmetrical, or if the photographs are not taken from a fixed altitude, a multiple view technique is used. This technique is used in the construction of digital orthophoto maps. It is possible to construct a relief map from aerial photographs, but computer programs can only compare the data accurately if the same vertical detail is provided to them. This vertical detail can be provided by the use of a laser range finder or a digital elevation model, or can be included in the image processing software. Category:Maps
