Injured striker Andy Reid says he is more motivated than ever this season after the Club's excellent FA Cup run has helped lift the mood around the squad. The Terriers midfielder also praised manager Chris Wilder for the role he has played in giving the players their best possible chance this season. Wilder has overseen a smooth campaign, racking up nine clean sheets in the cup, and currently sits fifth in the Sky Bet Championship having already passed up the chance to play in the Premier League. He has also overseen six away wins in the cup, something which is not commonplace at a league club, and has been quoted as saying he is "100%" confident of keeping the Club up this season. "Winning a competition like this is massive – it gives you confidence and lifts the mood," Reid told skybetfootball.com. "We're at a good moment and we're obviously only 12 games in. We've got loads of games to go and there's lots of fixtures to come." Reid himself enjoyed a good run in the cup, scoring twice in the semi-final win over Blackburn at Ewood Park, before going off injured with a calf injury in the final against Manchester City. He put the disappointment over losing out to City behind him, though, after returning from injury for the start of the season. "It wasn't really a disappointment to miss the final as

LiveCode - LiveCode Documentary
LiveCode is an easy to use rapid application development tool for native applications with a focus on cross platform applications. It enables the development of applications both for the Mac OSX and Windows platforms. The ability to compile applications from nearly any native language such as Objective-C, C++ or Java is one of the main strengths of LiveCode, as well as the ability to use the resulting applications across multiple platforms and devices. Combined with the OpenStep and Carbon APIs, LiveCode applications can be deployed and used on all modern devices, as well as on many different older platforms such as RISC OS and OS/2. An OpenStep framework is integrated with LiveCode and no additional plug-ins are needed to compile applications for distribution via the Mac App Store. In addition to the OpenStep framework, new applications can also access features provided by AppKit, including a window system, widget system, and print system. LiveCode provides a full set of development tools to help with any issue that might occur in the course of developing applications. These include a built in Simulator tool that helps to reduce the number of runtime errors, as well as full deployment to iPhone, iPad, Mac, Apple TV, and many other Apple devices.
