A Singapore resident, Dickson Ng, has been sentenced to three years' jail for cheating in a Singapore property sale. Singapore has been cracking down on rampant property cheating, with the Ministry of Law and Home Affairs under the Ministry of Law earlier this year proposing penalties of between five and seven years' jail, or a fine of up to S$500,000 or both. Mr Ng, who is not a Singaporean, was convicted in 2016 of making a "false statement" to his "misleading or deceptive" statement to settle his purchase of a Singapore property from a known defaulter, in breach of the Unfair Contract Terms Act. The court heard that Mr Ng had been told by the seller that he had a down payment of about S$620,000 (about S$814,000), when he had in fact had only about S$200,000. Mr Ng did not disclose the discrepancy to the seller, whom he had paid about S$40,000 in cash. When he realised that he had been scammed, he approached the sellers' agent and demanded a refund of the S$40,000 cash payment. He made the complaint after the receiver had already been appointed. He was convicted of a second charge of committing a similar act in the same property transaction. The first count was taken into consideration in sentencing. In October, Mr Ng committed the offence with which he was charged in 2018 at around 9.25pm on Saturday, the court heard. He had gone to pay S$200,000
