Q: Attribute Routing with QueryString I'm trying to use ASP.NET MVC4 and attribute routing on a web service. I want it so that only a few URL's will pass data to a controller. For example, if I had an URL that looked like this: It would pass the user and message parameters to a controller that looks like this:

public class Controller : ApiController { // GET
api/web/user?user=john&msg=hi
public string Get(string user, string msg) { return "hi " + user;
} } And, as you can see, I would just need the controller to process the URL on the base of the user and message. The problem I'm running into is that a query string isn't allowed after the question mark in an attribute routing rule. Is there a way to use attribute routing with a query string, or am I going to have to handcraft the routing for certain URLs? A: You need to use both: `[Route("api/web/get/{user}/{msg}")]` and `[Route("api/web/get/{msg}")]` which says that you want to route anything with a query string to the Get action of the WebApi controller. EDIT: As @Stuart suggested, if you are using global configuration, using a regex can help to be more specific, like this: `[Route("api/web/get/{user:.*?}")]` To learn more about attribute routing, check out the official documentation. . In Conclusion By learning how to identify and calculate the margin of error for a probability event, you can better understand how to interpret data and how to test a hypothesis in real life situations. Next time someone says “I’m 95% sure” or “There’s a 99% chance you’ll be accepted,” make sure you know what they mean.

---

---
