Click the map below to view the "Complex" version of the Wasatch Fault (map is zoomed in towards the area east of Salt Lake City). The complex is an irregularly shaped area of weakness about 1.5 miles long and 160 ft. high that extends below the Layton Hills and extends into the Wasatch Mountains and west into Davis and Weber Counties. To the east the complex extends into the Mexican Plateau and is called the Virgin Valley fault. The Wasatch and Uinta Complexes, a total of about 50 miles of faults, extend up to 18.5 miles below ground, form an inverted arch near the surface, and follow the Wasatch Mountain range from the north end to the south end of Salt Lake City. They are thought to separate the northwardly spreading Salt Lake Valley from the Olympic Mountain Range, which lies to the west. When earthquakes occur along the Wasatch Front, the focal point is typically only a few miles north of Salt Lake City,
