was 180 days for each patient. The patients' medical records were reviewed for the type and location of the injury, treatment provided, the condition before and after treatment and complications. The mean age of the patients was 59 ± 14.28 years. Fifty-one patients with skin grafting and 48 patients with hyperbaric oxygen treatment were followed up. After the treatment, the condition of the chronic radiation-induced injury improved. In patients who received hyperbaric oxygen therapy, two (4%) patients showed recurrence, whereas none of the patients who underwent skin grafts showed recurrence. Although the number of patients was small, the patients who underwent hyperbaric oxygen
